PILOT REFRESHER COURSES

These refresher courses are designed for you to keep your flying skills up-to-date and maintain your currency. Upon satisfactory completion of your flight review or proficiency check you will receive the logbook endorsement needed for you to continue exercising the privileges of your pilot certificate.

Flight Review or BFR

The BFR is a general review of your piloting skills and knowledge. During the flight review, your instructor will also discuss with you any new changes that have occurred since your last review flight. For most pilots one flight is all it takes to knock the rust off and receive a new Flight Review endorsement from your instructor.

FAR 61.56 states that a flight review must consist of 1 hour of ground training and 1 hour of flight training. To act as Pilot in Command (PIC) a pilot must have completed a flight review within the previous 24 calendar months.

The exact amount of ground or flight time for you to complete your flight review is dependent on your current level of proficiency.

Instrument Proficiency Check (IPC)

The IPC is not a place to cut corners. Schedule a day of fun and get your Instrument Proficiency Check completed at the same time. Your airplane or ours, we are ready for takeoff when you are.

Our comprehensive one day Instrument Refresher Course will instill renewed confidence in your IFR skills and keep you established on your next approach through the clouds. Training can be split into 2 days if desired.
